HIS ZERO HOUR.

The great bell of Notre Dame church rang out noisily in the midnight air. It was Christmas eve in the second year of the war and all Parisians were attending midnight mass. Inside the church, in the dim and flickering light of candles, figures could be seen huddled together, their hands clasped and their heads bowed. Toward the front of the church knelt a soldier, dressed in the French uniform, his handsome face upturned, his lips moving in prayer. At his side was the drooping figure of a girl. With her head resting on one hand, her quivering shoulders encircled by the strong arm of her soldier she prayed. She could hardly realize—he was leaving before morning for the front lines and he would not get back—perhaps not until the war was over. He had been stationed on the coast before and had come home occasionally but now—perhaps he might never come home. But no, no! surely the Blessed Virgin would care for him and as she prayed tears rolled down her cheeks and fell on the stone floor.

When the service was over Marie and her soldier, Jean walked slowly home, neither saying a word, yet both knowing what was in the other's heart. And when they reached the girl's home Jean, still holding herhand, as he had done during the service bent and kissed it saying, "Goodbye, Marie. God bless you." And in a minute he was gone leaving Marie there on the doorstep, speechless with emotion, her heart well nigh breaking.

Marie Deroches worked during the day at a little hat shop on the Champs Elysees. After her day's work in the store she returned to the home of her married sister, where she lived, and spent the evening caring for the children and helping la petite Marguerite with her English lesson. Because of the great number of English and American tourists who came into the shop Marie had found it necessary to study English and she now spoke it fluently.

But after Jean left for the trenches life became a void for Marie. The fear that she might never see him again haunted her day and night. She spent-all her spare time writing to him, reading and rereading his letters, and praying for his safe return.

The long cold winter slowly passed and spring came and with it hope came for Marie; for the Americans had joined the allies and were coming to France to save the country from utter destruction, and to save her Jean. She became less pale and quiet, and talked more cheerfully of his return. Since the day he left she had written him daily and received a letter nearly that often from him. The American troops were beginning to arrive in France and there were many Yanks in Paris. Marie often saw them pass the shop and the sight of them inspired her with hope.

Then one day in the early fall an American soldier went by the little shop and, seeing the pretty Marie through the window he went in. As the handsome soldier came toward the counter behind which she was sitting, Marie innocently wondered what a man could want in a woman's hat shop. Perhaps he wanted a "French creation" to send his sweetheart in America. Rising to meet him she said, "Do you want a hat, monsieur?"

"Vous parlez Anglais!" he exclaimed. "I was getting my French ready as I came in but I'm glad I shan't have to use it. I'm afraid you could never understand my French. I studied it three years back home, you know, but I think one ought really to live in France to gain the full benefit of the language. I love France already and I don't care how long I have to stay."

And so the conversation started and in a short time Marie found herself talking with this pleasant American as though she had always known him. Then as the conversation lagged, it suddenly occurred to the man that he was expected to buy something. He bought the first hat Marie showed him, murmuring a few words about a friend at home. Thrusting the package carelessly under his arm, the soldier took from his pocket a card, which he dropped on the counter, saying, as he walked toward the door, "I'll come in again sometime." And Marie found herself saying, "Yes, do."

It was midnight, a year after Jean Sovory had left Paris for the front lines. The Notre Dame bell was ringing and people were hurrying into the church. but Marie Deroches was not among the attendants at the midnight service. She was in a downtown cabaret, dressed in a decollete evening gown, her hair done high, not the simple, pure-hearted little sweetheart of Jean Savory but dancing madly around in the arms of the half intoxicated Frederick Townsend.

Jean Savory, receiving an unexpected furlough, had come home on Christmas eve to surprise Marie. But why had she not written him during the last few weeks?

Several months ago letters had become fewer. Then they had stopped altogether. Perhaps she had written and the letters had been lost. Yes, he was sure she had written, and yet—those last letters had not seemed like Marie, his Marie. These thoughts however could not weigh down his happy heart. His feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground as he hurried toward her home. Then, when her sister opened the door, merely stating that Marie was not at home, had gone to a cabaret in ——street, he hurried anxiously on, hoping against hope that he might see her alone, wondering why Marie should go to a cabaret, at least on Christmas eve and with whom.

At last Jean arrived at the cabaret. He hurried inside and not seeing her asked a friend who was standing near the door if she were there.

"I believe she's at the table in the corner to the left," was the reply. Jean crossed the room which was filled with a rough crowd of carousers, and, shaded by some thick, artificial palms, he looked through the foliage toward the table. And there in the secluded nook formed by the arrangement of palms and flowers, stood an American soldier, his hair tousled and his eyes silly in their expression, and in his arms was Marie, his Marie, her lips pressed tightly against the American's, her curly hair falling around her shoulders, her long, slender arms around the neck of the Yank.

It was Jean's zero hour.

Two days later, wounded and dying on No Man's Land, Jean Savory saw in his delirium his little Marie leaning over him and with a smile on his lips he gave up his life for France and for Marie.

THE FATHER O' ME GRANDFATHER.

"Is it a ghost story that you want? Well, me lads, sure an' this is a splendid night for the telling o' it. I mind once that the father o' me grandfather saw a—But draw up to the fire, boys, and put some apples to roast. Now, are ye ready?"

Uncle Tim lit his pipe and settled down in comfort. We boys shivered in expectation and piled more wood on the fire.

"It was in the valley of the Brandywine that the father o' me grandfather lived. Faith, an' it was but twenty years after the battle at Chadd's Ford. Ye know, boys, George III, the Hun that was kind of England, hired some of his baby-killin' fellow patriots to come over to fight the Yankees. Well, most of the Hessians fought but once that day; it was in front of a Yankee bullet that they stepped, an' that was all.

"An' it was on the farm of the father o' me grandfather that there was a field where the Yankee line ran that day, an' in the field next to it there were so many Hessians buried that a grevayard it was. Faith, an' it was in those days that the Yanks shot as straight as they do now.

"An' it was gold that there was buried with the Hessians. It was known for a fact that there was a man who plowed up the skull of a dead man an' it was when he lifted up the wighof it that there fell out a stream of gold. Syre an' the robber it was that had it all tied up in his hair.

"Well, the father o' me grandfather was Irish, ye know, an' he feared not the spirits nor the divil himself. It was on just sich a night as this that he took his spade by the handle, an' with his lantern castin' shadows before an' behind, he went out an' when he came back it was his hair that was as white as snow. Yes, an' it was his hair that was white until he died, bless his soul.

"It was on a Friday an' the 13th that he fell asleep at twelve o'clock in the mornin' an' dreamed that the captain of the dead ones it was that had buried a chest of gold at the foot of the oak that grows just at the end of the Yankee entrenchments around the top of the long hill above Chadd's Ford, Faith, an' it was the brave man he was! At midnight o' the same day he dug an' dug around the foot of the oak, an' it was givin' up that he was when his spade struck something that was hard.

"An then he dug some more until he could see plain that it was hard metal he had uncovered. Faith, an' he dug so hard that he never noticed that it was a bony skeleton he dug up before he ever touched the box. An' now it was when he had it almost uncovered, an' was restin' a bit to see if he could maybe guess how many million dollars it was that there was in it, that he heard something rattle. Beihnd him it was, an' o' course he turned around quick. An' by the holy saints, that skeleton that he had scattered around careless like was pickin' itself up. The hat rose up off the head of the father o' me grandfather. An' when the skeleton got itself put together it stood up and felt itself to see if its bones were all there, all the time glarin' at him an' movin' its jaws savage like. Even the lantern got scared an' went out. But it was in the dark that the father o' me grandfather could see it, an' hear it too.

"Faith, an' it was all at once that it jumped at him and clasped him around the neck, but not very affectionate. An' it was together that they rolled down that long hill, with the dead one pinchin' an bitin', an' the live one near to dyin' of fright. Then they rolled right into the Brandywine just below Chadd's Ford an of' course the dead one die for sure then because water is fatal to ghosts, an' the chill of the current brought the live one back to life. Well, an' he climbed out, an' they do say that the dead Hessians it was that rose up all over the field an' reproached the father o' me grandfather for destroyin' the life o' their captain."

Uncle Tim knocked the ashes out of his pipe an' yawned. "That last might be true," he said, "but it's in doubt of it that I am."

"But the treasure!" we cried.

"It's to bed that ye are going right away, boys. Sure, it's the explanations that would spoil the best ghost story ever told."

-Ruth Holt.

MAIL?

John Lane, a private, was envied of his pals. He had a host of relatives and a mob of friends. His private mail and parcel post packages almost crippled the force—but it didn't. If superfluity had made John a little indifferent to his private popularity, his liberal generosity with the contents of his packages, made him beloved of his mates. For generosity added to good humor, loveableness, and stern honesty and truthfulness was a good reason for John's popularity with everyone.

But it isn't intensely exiting to wonder, as the other lads did, about the mail, when one was sure to get three or four letters and at least one package. Especially was all this rather dry when the dearest girl on earth wasn't one of the correspondents. John reflected as he slowly, evenly, paced to and fro. When one is on guard duty, it is a good time to reflect.

He was relieved just as mail was about to be distributed. His friends crowded around. But all John received was the surprise of his young life. There was no mail for him.

Four hours later, when again on duty he reflected again. What was the matter with everyone? It was rather an uncomfortable feeling to have "no mail." Hadn't he written? Surely, he had. Every night, he wrote gobs and gobs of cards. It was a peculiar circumstance to say the least, and the guard almost stopped to scratch at the mop of black curls that brushes had never subdued—but he didn't.

On being relieved, he went back to his barracks. On the rack was a letter for him and an apology from the carrier. The letter had caught in the sack. John was relieved, intensely relieved. His world was square again. Not one day had passed without mail—for him. But on opening the envelope he was disappointed. The envelope contained no letter, only the words "a girl" and no address.

Did he write? Oh, can't you, don't you, just know he did? And she wrote. Oh, indeed she did, every two weeks. John knew now what joy it was to await the mail. There was only one letter he wanted—but still he received letters by the score. He had begged his correspondent to tell him her name. She did not. He told her all about himself from the time he cut his first tooth at four months up to—up to the latest second. And he wrote every day.

A rapturous day came. She wrote that she expected to visit the camp shortly with her father. Although she knew their friendship and correspondence had been most nonventional still she wanted to see him. If shedecided she would come, she would send only a photo to let him know. Then drop into camp soon.

Three days of hard drilling dragged by. John's appetite lagged. His pals sympathetically presented with him a large jar of sweet pickles. Then came the picture and the words, "Will arrive today."

What a picture! He hadn't dreamed she'd look like that. It was his pal, Bob, who saw the photographer's date 1897 on the card board. How the boys hooted him cold! And John was madder than a newly commissioned lieutenant can get. He was a gentleman, anyway. If she came, he would be politely civil and that's all, John thought as he tore into bits the fatal picture.

"Why John, what are you tearing up?"

That voice! They had quarreled before he joined. Was she making up? "Hello, Helen, mighty glad to see you. Howdy Mr. Graham!"

"Yes, John."

"And you, dear sweet angel, forgave me and wrote all those letters to an old grouch like me?"

"Yes, John. We were both grouchy, at first."

"Helen I love you more than ever before."

"So do I, love you, John."

GETTIN' LETTERS.

When you're far away from home and you're feeling kind of blue, When the world is topsy turvey, nothin' sets just right for you. You can sneer at all your troubles, and your cares you never mind, When you've really had a letter from the girl you left behind.

When the cook is downright nutty and his biscuits never raise, When he feeds you canned tomatoes for just seventeen days, You can quite forget he's nutty and you treat him fairly kind, If you've really had a letter from the girl you left behind.

When the captain gets a grouch on, and has bawled you out for fair, When some pesky Lieut. has sassed you, which at home he wouldn't dare You can lift your chin and whistle, and that's easy you will find, If you've really had a letter from the girl you left behind.

When a letter comes you grab it, right before the other guys, And you get a little vision of the light that's in her eyes, You can see her smiles and dimples, and for other girls you're blind, When you've really had a letter from the girl you left behind.

Just a sheet or two of paper with a purple stamp or two, But it means a whole creation to the heart and soul of you, And you get to feelin' pious and you pray a bit, you mind, For the great Almighty's blessing on the girl you left behind.

BOOST THE TECH.

The TECH staff is up against a proposition this year, which is much harder than the student body can realize. Owing to the army situation at Bradley it was unable to attempt the usual publication in the fall. All the school was disorganized by the government control and the attempt would have been foolish. Nevertheless the school paper was greatly missed and immediately after demobilization plans were started toward organizing the TECH.

The editor and business manager were elected by the council and they immediately chose a most competent staff. No time was lost in getting to work and there were many difficulties to meet. For a time it seemed as though there would be no possible way of trying to publish the paper for the remaining two quarters. But after much labor things took on a better appearance and therefore the first issue of the TECH is in circulation.

The students should easily be able to see that to uphold the standard of our paper, it will be more necessary than ever for the entire school to cooperate with the staff. Not only should everyone subscribe but no person should be satisfied until he or she has had some article or joke published in the TECH.

The TECH is run by Bradley and is your paper. Take some pride in it by showing some pep and contributing to it. This opening number is not the paper it should be. The reason for this is that the vacation came right after the staff had been chosen and no cooperation could be had with the student body.

Now, let's see the school wake up and show some interest in their paper. Everyone help to make the TECH a publication to be proud of and let's hear no one say a word about our paper that isn't of praise and encouragement.

THE Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. has been in control of the national association during the existences of the S. A. T. C They built a comfortable little hut on the campus just north of the gym. As the armistice has now been signed the national association can no longer keep this hut so a society at Bradley is being encouraged.

Before the war a Y. M. C. A. was carried on at Bradley with very good success. Through the influence of the Y. many good speakers were brought here who gave very interesting speeches. The Y. has been dead during the first quarter of school but should now resume its former activities.

A conference is to be held in Bloomington the ninth and tenth of this month and as Bradley has, in the past, had a fairly strong association she should send a representative to this conference. By the return of this representative many good ideas will be brought back which can be followed out by the association to its advantage.

Now that school has again resumed its old activities so will the Y. M. C. A. and with the cooperation of the student body we will have as good and will strive to have a better association than in past years.

At a meeting held January 8, 1919 the following officers were elected: Harry Gordon, president; Richard Stureman, vice-president; Theo Collier, secretary and treasurer.

It is needless to say any more about these officers as we know they are capable and will do all in their power to take charge of their duties for the benefit of all concerned.

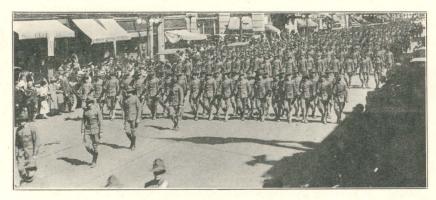

THANKS TO MISS GIVINN.

We extend thanks to Miss Givinn, the librarian of Bradley Institute for the splendid cooperation and assistance she gave to us during the fall quarter.

LIEUT. E. M. HUXFORD and S. A. T. C.

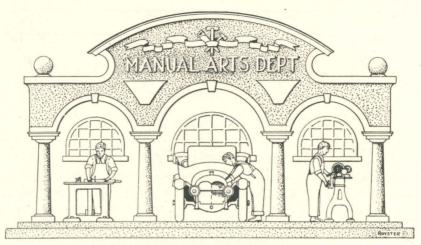

CAMP BRADLEY

Bradley as a school owes more than they realize to the United States government for the establishment of a military post at this institution. Although many times they were called on to help the camp, and at these times gave liberally, all these deeds were fully repaid by the excellent reputation that was given this college and also the city of Peoria.

Through the continual efforts of Major Leffel and his staff, the best of results were gained by the soldiers in their training here. The name of Bradley was carried over the country and even to Europe by the men who left here upon completion of their course. The name will always be remembered as having been the location of an American Army Camp and the men who have helped make Bradley's reputation in this line should by no means be overlooked.

Bradley has given all she had toward the winning of the war and in return the soldiers and officers have given her their all. They have placed her name over all of the United States and for that reason their departure should be a great regret to all those interested in Bradley's welfare.

NEW SHORT COURSE FOR FARMERS.

The popularity of the tractor course is very evident by the ever increasing number of students. This department has grown so rapidly that sufficient floor space was not available in the garages. To meet this need, "A" barracks, just east of the gymnasium has been converted into a tractor department. Eight tractors, all of the latest models and a number of gasoline engines of various types and designs constitute the equipment.

Various courses in tractor work are now offered by the institute, including special ones of two, eight and twelve weeks. These were introduced to meet the special needs of farmers who wished to learn this pronising industry before the spring planting begins.

The first course, two weeks in length, cover the fundamental principles of the gas engine, transmission mechanixm, ignition, carburetion and lubrication. It is rather short and compact, but for the busy farmer who can allow himself only two weeks from his work, it is ideal.

The second course, eight weeks in length, covers all of the work of the first course, takes up the study of the gas engine more in detail togther with valve timing, and grinding, fitting piston rings, bearings, etc.; gears, chain wheels, etc.; magneto and battery ignition, wiring, etc.; fuels, combustion, and lubrication.

The third course, twelve weeks in length, takes up a broader and more detailed study of the tractor, gasoline engine, and automobile. It covers the work of the second course and in addition, considerable machine shop work, carpentry, blacksmithing, and cement work in introduced to make the course as practical and of as much value as possible.

NEW ARRANGEMENT OF THE ART COURSE.

This year the class in advanced freehand drawing, otherwise known as Drawing 6, is to follow out a new plan of procedure under the supervision of Mr. Humphrey. They are taking a more definite study of the drawing of the human figure. Heretofore this class worked almost entirely as individual according to their ability. In this way the better students were more advanced, and some others, less advanced. As this was not especially satisfactory, the new plan is to keep the class more closely together. This arrangement may have a disadvantage in the fact that the better students may have to make some slight sacrifice of his ability, but it has equal advantages in the fact that the slower student will need to put over his best effort to make a standing in the class. This method will naturally encourage the slower student to think and to act more quickly and will tend to create a rivalry and an increase of interest for the work among the class members.

It is hoped and expected that the work done by this class will have gone far enough by the spring tefm to introduce the use of oil paints. This is a new phase of the work in freehand drawing in this department. Although there is some doubt as to the student being well enough prepared for this side of art, it should increase in the interest the freehand work.

SPECIAL COURSE IN ADVANCED ARCHITECTURAL DRAWING.

A special course in Architectural Drawing is being given during this term. This includes the study of the Ionic, Doric and Corinthian Orders of architecture, and leads up to the designing of small structures were these-orders might be used, such as banks, public libraries, etc.

MACHINE SHOP NOTES.

The efficiency of the machine shop is daily increasing under the supervision of Mr. Raymond. During the past few months vast changes have taken place in this department and equally as vast ones are being planned for the near future. The great number of soldiers who saw advantages in this line of work made it necessary to increase the equipment. To meet these needs a new milling machine and a new shaper were installed.

With this increase of equipment, as small as it may appear to some, great things have been accomplished in this department by both the men of the army and the other students. A lathe which had been under construction for several years was soon completed and set up for use; the two sixteen inch lathes which had been idle for months because of some broken parts were made fit for use in a surprisingly short time; and a dozen or more bench vises were finished and assembled by this industrious bunch of workers. In addition to these things, the whole shop has been placed on a greater efficiency basis and now ranks with the best of its kind in the United States.

Now that all these things have been done we might say it was enough, but not so, for several excellent contrivances are now well under way. A fixture for boring and grinding automobile cylinders was designed by Mr. Raymond and is being made by the students. When it is completed, which will be very soon, it will be mounted onto one of the large sixteen inch lathes. There it can be used to good advantage until a suitable base can be made for it.

Among the other things of interest in this department is the repairing or rather the "remaking" of automobile flywheels. These old flywheels, made useless by having the teeth stripped, are first turned in the lathe, a steel ring is then shrunk on and new teeth are cut. The work is so neat and perfect that an untrained eye is unable to distinguish these remade wheels from new ones.

VULCANIZING.

The department of the Manual Arts which was placed in charge of Mr. Neill has been a busy one for the past eight months and many soldiers have been trained as gunsmiths who could go into the field with a kit of hand tools and make repairs for the army rifles and machine guns.

Now that the war is over, the department is to practically return to the basis as before. The automobile class and a few special students make up the class. The course includes a study of the rubber production and the compounding of it for the various uses. Following this is a study of the fabrics and rubber stocks use din the manufacture of tires, treating with the construction or tire building. Also the study of the various rims and road repairs of tires and tubes. Lectures are given on the use and abuse of tires.

This makes a very practical course and one that is becoming very popular.

NEW GARAGE.

The automobile department has grown so rapidly during the past six months that it was necessary to build an addition to the garage. This addition is forty feet by eighty feet and two stories high. The first floor is used as a garage exclusively. In this section are housed forty or more automobiles of all descriptions, some waiting to be repaired and some already repaired awaiting to be taken away. On the second floor is the engine room, storage battery department, and automobile electrical department.

Mr. Hewitt who is in charge of both tractor and automobile departments has placed them on a bassi equal to any of its kind in the middle west, we should appreciate his efforts and feel proud of what he has done.

COSTUME DESIGN.

A new course has been introduced in the Manual Arts this quarter. The work is in costume designing for the senior Normal girls, and is closely connected with the sewing clasess of the Domestic Science Department. It requires two hours a day for a period of three months. This seems to be of more than usual value and interest to the members of the class.

NOTES.

The Senior Domestic Science girls have a class in house-planning under the supervision of Mr. Elwood. The object of the course is to teach the girls to plan a model house to fit a certain condition, to plan for the interior decoration and to som. extent the furnishing of zhouse. The Drawing for the Practical Electric class is the planning of houses and it also takes up the wiring diagrams of the different types of houses and the materials used in their construction.

The Clay Modeling class are beginning to learn the art of making ammunition from the clay, so in case the flag is lowered to half mast at any time you will know the reason.

Instructions on soldering and brazing are given to the automobile and tractor students now. This includes the study of the composition of the soft and hard solders and the methods of soldering and brazing of all metals. This knowledge enables the students to do general repair work in this line and emphasized the work of radiator repair on automiboles and tractors.

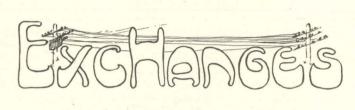

The second year academy students have a class in Bench Mechanics under Mr. Neill. This includes the principles of the use of all hand tools in metal work, and making of general repairs of all machines which can be done with hand tools.

The work in the mill under Mr. Hurff has not had time to show itself to any great extent. The class work is to be practically the same as before the shop was turned over to the government for army training.

Our Misses' Shop—

Young Misses like to come here. Our styles have the simplicity and individuality that make college girls Peoria's most striking dressers. Then, too, you can be assured of values—our qualities are most exacting at prices to fit every pocketbook.

We have often been asked what an exchange department is. We take the liberty to quote from the Augustana Observer upon this subject.

"The average person abhors critics except when their remarks are complimentary. Nothing is nore displeasing to the student writer than to see a profusion of red marks on his composition when the instructor returns it. and perhaps he often feels discouragee and tempted to give up all hopes of ever being able to produce a composition without fault. The many corrections stare him in the face as marks of discontent on the part of the teacher, while they in reality show the teacher's interest in and efforts to educate him the very best he knows how. They are marks of friendly criticism made not to discourage, but to encourage and help him along in his work. A little criticism, whether complimentary or not, is of inestimable value to every person in whatever branch of activity he may be engaged. The world needs critics that will teach men to think accurately and carefully before they set out to their particular work; critics that will teach us to think not only in publishing a college paper or college annual, not only in writing an essay or a theme required in some course of study, but in every task, large or small, that we perform. The exchange department serves as a kind of a critic on college publications, but is not to be considered as a court that decides whether a publication is of superior or inferior quality. Its main purpose is merely to point out the parts that deserve comment and to suggest improvements that might be made. The exchange editor does not desire to assume the position of a judge to pass unmerciful sentences on his colleagues, but he merely wants to exchange opinions with them. Keeping this purpose clearly in mind we may be greatly benefited by our mutual criticism, and the exchange department becomes a vital part of the college paper.

W. WILSON.

Tommy Woodrow Wilson—
In the presidential chair—
Sure is great on politics;
He beats 'em all for fair,
He promulgates his doctrine
Of "politics adjourned,"
And then before election,
Old Woody—(I'll be durned)—
Forgets his good intentions
And the fates of autocrats;
He tells the people frankly:—
"Elect the Democrats!"

The following papers have been received and are on our exchange tables: Augustana Observer; The Decaturian; Lombard Review; Student Life; The Missouri Miner; The Western Courier; Black Hawk; The Opinion.

We were very much interested in an article on Fort Sheridan by Billy Hayes in the Decaturian. It savors much of the "Famous First" eh what, Billy?

The Opinion—As usual your paper contains a peppy joke department but so far we have been unable to distinguish between it and your exchange department. A few jokes in the exchanges help a great deal but do you think it is the best policy to have so many?

The most solemn occasion in the S. A. T. C. life, has undoubtedly been "Retreat", when the bugler—that's his official name or officious title, but it is called "Bungler" by the enlisted men—blows "To the Colors" most abominably. The solemn part is to stand at attention until it is all over and try to keep from laughing.—Wx.

Augustana Observer—You put out a well edited paper but we have a suggestion to make. The writer spent an unpleasant half-hour trying to find the end of a short article, only to suddenly stumble upon it cleverly concealed among numberless advertisements. Do you think this is best arrangement possible?

A Freshman girl who was to make a report on one of the Canterbury Tales, rushes up to the Prof. three minutes before class, "Oh, Professor, I have lost my tale, what am I to do?"

SPEAKING OF WATCHES

The watch on the Rhine did not interest the young miss, December 25th, so much as the watch that decorated her wrist.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY CLUB.

During the fore part of November a meeting of the Domestic Economy girls was held, to discuss plans for the organization of a club, of both social and educational nature.

On November 25th will Miss Day presiding, the club was formally organized and given the name of Domestic Economy Club. The following officers were elected: president, Zona Morehouse; vice president, Marybelle Anderson; secretary, Elizabeth Bourns; treasurer, Avis Anderson.

RECEPTION AT THE PRACTICE HOUSE.

On December 6th Miss Day and the new officers of the Domestic Economy Club gave a reception at the Practice House for the members of the club. The time passed quickly with lively games and music. Dainty refreshments were served and the guests departed feeling that the new club would be a great success, bringing about a closer cooperation between the girls of that department.

MISS HARRIS DEMONSTRATES FOR CLUB.

The third regular mee ing of the Domestic Economy Club on December 13th was a combination of business and pleasure. At the beginning of the meeting Miss Harris, of Chicago, gave a pleasant and beneficial demon stration on "Corn Products."

Later a very interesting program was furnished by some of the members of the club; Miss Bocock read Mr. Hoover's speech regarding, "The Food Situation."

Miss Buchanan read extracts from the President's Peace Message. Miss Morehouse read "Fore-Ward."

The meeting was then adjourned and all present enjoyed an elaborate chicken dinner.

OUR NEW INSTRUCTOR.

Thebeginning of the winter quarter finds us with a new Domestic Economy teacher, Miss Grace Brinton, who is taking the position formerly held by Mrs. Cowan. Although we feel greatly the loss of Mrs. Cowan from our faculty, we are certain Miss Brinton will ably fill her place. She comes to us with a Ph. B. degree from the University of Chicago and a M. A degree from the teachers' college of Columbia University. Previous to taking a Domestic Economy training she taught English at the State Normal, Superio Wis. Since then she has been head of the Domestic Economy Department of Laurel School, Cleveland, Ohio. Last year she taught in the State Normal at San Jose, California.

CHORAL CLUB.

It came as rather a surprise when the announcement was made that the Chorus would resume operations, for we had thought that with the passage of the flu, the S. A. T. C., and attendant evils, about every known school activity had died of neglect. It seems not however, as this column gives evidence.

Choral Club met in the chapel Tuesday noon January seventh, to discuss plans and elect officers. It is Dr. Wyckoff's idea to work up some of the better war songs in the short time remaining, and later in the year give a popular concert gratis to the public. The fact that both the songs and the price of admission will be popular should make a double appeal.

Officers elected were, president, Lois Wysong; secretary-treasurer, Margaret Turnbull; librariank Leland Fleming (he does all the dirty work).

The first Classical Club meeting was held at the Hostess House on November 7th. This was a small meeting owing to the weather. The program was as follows:

- 1. America (in Latin) by the Club.
- 2. An explanation of classical post cards by Marian Reeves, a game played with these cards by the Club.
 - 3. Reading of the "Minotaur" by Miss Bierbower.
 - 4. Explanation of the myth by Miss Hulsebus.

The second meeting was held on December 5th at the Hostess House and was a success in every way. The attendance was large and the program was a very good one. It was as follows:

- Comparison of Caesar's warfare in Gaul and ours in France in 1918 by Margaret Turnbul.
- 2. A Debate by George Overton and Robert McCormick. Resolved: that the Ambition of Caesar was Justifiable. McCormick had the negative and Overton the affirmative.
- 3. Scene II., Act II., from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar. Caesar, Theodore Collier, Calpurnia, Josephine Cowell, (slave) and Decius, Herbig Younge.
 - 4. Foreword to The Roman Triumph by Jack Field .
- 5. Detail of a Roman Triumph. Caesar, John Taylor, Priest, Booth Williamson, Vestal Virgins, Wilhelmina Hoagland and Phyllis Maple, Praeco (crier), Frank Foster.

This acting of the Roman triumph was most interesting and original. In fact it is the first time such a thing has been given. It shows the triumphal march of Caesar to the Temple of Jupiter to celebrate his great victories. He makes his offerings to Jupiter at the altar and gives thanks to him while vestal virgins swing censers and light the many candles upon the altar. The priest presides over the service and the little praeco goes before blowing his bugle and announcing the celebrations. Altogether it was a most impressive scene. All the programs promise to be interesting the rest of the year. The club is continuing its usual good work.

The English Club was reorganized at a meeting held December 16, 1918. The program decided upon for the remainder of this year includes four meetings, each of which consists of short reviews of two popular magazines and a book. The membership has been limited to sixteen—and each member is expected to take an active part in the programs and discussions.

Officers elected for this year are: president Ruth Drysdale secrtary-treasurer, Ruth Holt.

Program for January meeting:

Atlantic Monthly, Ruth Drysdale; American, Lucile Cook, Book Review, Helen Dixon.

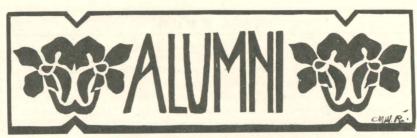

THE FRENCH CLUB.

The first meeting of the French Club took place the twenty-sixth of November. The officers for the year 1918-1919 were elected: le president, M. Taylor, la vice presidente, Mlle. W. Hoagland; le tresorier, M. Wittick; la secretaire, Mlle. Avery; la pianiste, Mlle. Cherry. A program committee, composed of Mlle. Reeves, Mlle. Hardesty and M. Salzenstein, was also chosen. The Club voted to give a play sometime in the winter quarter.

On the nineteenth of December, the French Club held its second meeting. It took the form of a Christmas festival. All the members came costumed and masked. Of course there was Santa Claus, (Clarence Wynd) and candles and Christmas cakes, candies and favors. Miles. Dorsey, Bottigheimer and Avery costumed as representatives of the poor class, the middle class and the noble class respectively, told of the customs of the French at Christmas time, and also several stories. The Club extends its thanks to Mile. Hopper and to the program committee who made this meeting such a success.

TAYLOR, BASKET BALL MANAGER.

When the Board of Control met during the third week of December to elect a manager for basketball, they found some fourteen persons named as candidates. After a short deliberation Taylor was chosen to fill the position for the coming season. This job is a combintion of secretary and manager and is far from a "soft snap." Already Taylor has written to most of the teams in the "Little 19" asking for games and has a scheduled cleven. This prompt action only shows the interest that Manager Taylor takes in the school activities and demonstrates his untiring efforts to promote his school in the standing of the "Little 19" and college circles. Every student would be doing his least in appreciating his efforts for a successful basketball year if he would attend the games and support the good old Bradley team.

From the class of 1918 came the elegant gift of a bubbling fountain and with it comes these poetic thoughts:

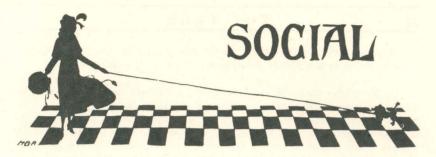

Bubbling, laughing fountain, as a gift,
We left thee, to our Alma Mater's care;
Cheer and refresh the pilgrim throng that come
Seeking her shrine of learning on the hill;
Here let our memory blossom in thy spray,
And when an '18 classmate joureeys back,
To pay a loving tribute to his school,
Shower him with memories of happy days,
And loyal friendships formed at B. P. I.

BRADLEY UPHOLDS FOOTBALL REPUTATION.

As Bradley again takes up her work and discontinues the S. A. T. C., athletics will be resumed with the same old pep that Bradley has always displayed. The period during which the S. A. T. C. was in full sway was quite a boost and advertiser for athletics at Bradley. It is no longer "Camp Bradley" but just "Bradley" with all the pep of the student body and that which was left by eight hundred U. S. fighting men.

The football season developed one of the strongest teams that Bradley has had in years, for in addition to the students in school there was a wealth of material in the vocational and collegiate sections of the S. A. T. C. Over two-thirds of the football squad were members of the army. This percent greatly increased the vitality of the team as their constant drilling and early retiring hours kept them in good condition.

But as Bradley was fortunate in having many new players, so were other schools in which the S. A. T. C. units were established. And as Bradley proudly took narrow margin defeats from its few opponents this fall, it is no reason to believe that Bradley lacked any qualities that go to make up a winning team. For the players played as a team, and, if at any time an individual play was needed, there always was someone there to carry it out. So while Bradley did not have a team that came out highest on the score, she nevertheless had a team that Bradley will be proud to claim.

One person who was quite responsible for the success of the team is Coach Lieutenant Schapiro who came to Camp Bradley in September and almost immediately was appointed athletic director of the camp. During football season he was always on the field with the red and white warriors and was in a very large degree, the backbone of the fight and "pep" of the squad.

During the season Bradley played four games and although we came out on the short end of the scores, the games were of the finest style that have been seen on Bradley's gridiron for some time.

BRADLEY BARELY BEATEN BY STRONG WESLEYAN ELEVEN. Score 6—2.

In a game hotly contested from the very start, Wesleyan barely nosed out a 6—2 victory over Bradley. This was Bradley's first game of the season and was favored with fine weather and an excellent field. Open field running was the feature of the game znd some spectucalar long runs were made. Wilson, Doubet, Riddle, and Abrams featured in this art.

Bradley outplayed Wesleyan throughout most of the game forthe ball was held by the red and white men in Wesleyan's territory and threatened their goal on different occaions. In the third quarter Bradley worked the ball down to Wesleyan's nine yard line but lost it on a fumble. On the next play Rohweer, star tackle for the opponents tried to circle left and but was thrown behind the goal line by Derges making a safety and two points for Bradley.

Wesleyan's winning play come in the final quarter when they executed a play for fifty yards and a touchdown. Abrams received a twenty yard pass from Rohweer and raced thirty more yards. Rohweer's try at a goal failed and the whistle blew ending the game in Wesleyan's favor 6—2.

RED AND WHITE BATTLE TO TIE WITH EUREKA 7-7.

The afternoon of November 17th found Bradley's gridiron heavy wit mud which prophesied a slow game. At 3:00 p. m. the whistle blew and a battle royal started. Eureka's backfield had the edge on Bradley being heavier and better able to gain by their weight. But what distance was lost by the hilltoppers in their lack of weight was more than made up by frequent forward passes which Derges and Gage succeeded in carrying through.

Bradley lost a victory by losing the ball on fumbles when within striking distance of the goal. In the second quarter Gage got two passes for 15 yards each and Derges took a pass for Bradley's lone touchdown. Doubet kicked goal.

Darkness was enshrouding the field and Eureka pulled a trick pass that brought the ball on Bradley's two yard line. They then carried it over on the next two downs and Lane kicked goal tying the score 7—7. The game ended one minute later.

BRADLEY TAKES COUNT FROM MILLIKIN, 26-13.

Bradley was outweighed about ten pounds to the man when the teams were lined up for the big scrimmage at Decatur, November 25th. Both teams started fast with Millikin gaining by carrying the ball and Bradley by forward passes. Bradley counted first when Gage received a pass from Doubet ten yards over the line. Doubet missed goal. Then Lee of Millikin started their score with a touchdown and Younk kicked goal. The ball then changed hands several times until the third quarter came around when Lee came through for another six points and Crum missed goal.

Roe of Bradley raised the score to 12 when he carried the ball over the line after it had been worked down the field by forward passes. Doubet kicked goal marking Bradley's last counter.

In the final quarter Millikin raised the score from a tie to 26—13 thereby claiming the "Little 19" football championship. Doubet, Derges, Gage and Avery showed up exceptionally well on the defense.

THE BIG GAME.

With the breaks and the weight against them the plucky Camp Bradley football eleven met a glorious defeat at the hand of the Lombard College S. A. T. C. of Galesburg, before a large and most enthusiastic audience on the Camp Bradley Field Saturday afternoon. The score was 10 to 7 in favor of the visitors and was a great showing indeed, for the Camp Bradley warriors for it is the first time in the four games that the sturdy bunch from Lombard have been scored upon this season.

Camp Bradley was a bit slow at the start and the teriffic drive of the Lombard attack had them going after which Lombard returned the coniment following two downs. Murphy then dropping back to the Bradley 33 yard line and booting a goal from placement for the first scoring of the game.

Hughes kicked to Bradley and following hard play, Bradley was held in the center of the fie.d. King the Lombard star, here started a rampage and on his lucky fumble on the Bradley five yard line, the ball rolled behind the Bradley goal line, Anderson recovering and smothering the oval hebind the Bradley goal line for a touchdownScore Lombard 10, and Bradley 0.

Bradley played wonderful football in the second quarter, but the breaks were against them when the Lombard goal line was in sight, their efforts at forward passing proving more or less costly.

However, they played Lombard to a standstill in that quarter all the way and in the third period they brought the home rooters to their feet by working the ball to the Lombard 40 yard, a forward pass, Roe to Derges then turning the first score made against Lombard this season. Doubet kicked goal. Score Lombard 10, Bradley 7.

In the final quarter, Bradley did some fast work in the openingpart but when a series of forward passes again failed them, Lombard started a final streak towards the Bradley goal, in a determined effort to count again. They met "some" opposition and however, and no Yankee at Chateau Thierry put up the fight that the entire Bradley clan did on their own one yard, with the fourth down staring them in the face and with Lombard with the ball. They held, and they held like the Yanks that they are and with Doubet then booting the ball to safety, time for the end of the game was called with the ball in Lombard's possession on Bradley's 35 yard line.

Derges, Gage, Roe and every individual member of the Camp Bradley team starred, in the great and gritty battle that they waged while the powerful King and Murphy, were the entire team for the Lombard. All Camp Bradley lacked Saturday was the breaks, for they tied and even bettered Lombard in clean football. All honor and congratulations are due them even in their light defeat.

us. At first it looked as if we would not even have the use of our own floor, it being used as a barracks for army men. But since the camp has been discontinued the gym has been vacated and during the holidays has been put in first class condition. Not only was the gym floor given a thorough overhauling, but also the pool room, locker rooms, shower rooms, etc., were put in ship shape condition.

Then too, Bradley had no basketball coach when the season should have started and Mr. Bickle got busy to hunt one up. Our good old coach, Fred C. Brown being with the army men in France, Bradley knew it would be a big task to find someone who could amply fill his shoes. Then the unexpected happened and Olson, for three years star guard of Wisconsin and all-conference man, signed a contract with Bradley to give her his best during the coming year. It will be remembered that Wisconsin won four out of the last six conference championships so Olson plainly has some record to go on. No doubt he will instill into the Bradley squad a few of Wisconsin's tactics which will be sure to made a bid for the "Little 19" championship.

A glance at the candidates will give some idea as to the promised strength of the team. First there are three letter men back from last year; Doubet and Catlin forwards, and Gordon a guard. It was this combination that helped defeat Eureka-last year's "Little 19" champs. Following these are men who have played with Bradley, but not long enough to win a "B"; L. Hayward, Taylor and G. Battles. Two men from Manual Training High School who will be way up in the running are Gerdes, center for two years and Stein an experienced forward. Ryf, a three year basketball man from Washington high school will bear close watching. Peoria High School also sent candidates for the team who have no mean ability. Wilson who played guard for three years during two of which he was captain is showing up in his old time form. Bilbrough, a forward, and Gage, utility man are keeping astride with their former records while Schoenheider also attends the daily practices. Blossom also comes in for honors in shooting baskets between halves. Tucker and Burner, two academy men will make strong bids for berths on the team. So after Coach Olson gets hold of these men and starts the old fighting spirit, Bradley has the material to help her come out on the long end of the scores in the games which are schedued below.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN
By Featrice Bairfax.

Dear Mrs. Bairfax:

I am a fair young country lass, with rustic beauty. I have been keeping pretty steady company with a young man and am very fond of him, but he does not seem to return the attentions. What shall I do?

Anxiously.

ANN SUTTON.

Dear Ann:

Would advise that you get in touch with the Scranton Correspondence School as they have a good course in "How to Win a Man." If this fails try Leda Wysong, 721 Illinois Avenue, she should know.

Dear Ed:

I am the son of a wealthy saloon keeper but unfortunately my sweetheart objects to his line of business. Now I can't change his business and I can't change her opinion. Please advise.

GRAHAM BATTLES.

Dear Buddie:

Would advise that you leave home or else teach your girl to drink.

F. B.

Dear Featrice:

Have been having quite a time with my sweetheart. He has taken to drinking and gambling. These divert his attentions from me. Now I do not mind the above amusements but I do feel slighted. What shall I do to win him back? I feverishly await your reply.

LUCILLE JOHNSTON.

Dear Lucille:

I would advise that you learn to roll the ivory dominoes, therefore, if you win, he will have no money left with which to purchase the liquor or to gamble.

As ever,

F. B.

Dear Mrs. Bairfax:

My husband has just been sent up the river for a second story job. Sister Mamie who had a swell job at the laundry, has the mumps. Brother Ike is down with the small pox and my little baby has the whooping cough. We are all out of money and need something to eat. Please send some kind lady to my house to help us.

Yours till death, JESSIE ISTROVITCH, 1103½N. Adams St.

Dear Jess:

Have sought in vain to find some one to help you but can find no one. Would advise you to drown yourself and end your troubles.

Yours welcome,

F. B.
